Who We Are

Anthropology is the study of humans, past and present, but it is intrinsically connected to the social, biological, and physical sciences and the humanities. Although anthropologists are specialized in one or more areas, namely sociocultural anthropology, biological/physical anthropology, archaeology, and linguistics, they often integrate the theories and research findings from other branches of knowledge into their projects, and collaborate with non-anthropologists. To promote anthropology’s cross-disciplinary spirit, Antropologia launched in the spring of 2015 to promote the works of undergraduate students from any NYU schools, insofar as these works seek to solve or indeed problematize the contemporary concerns found in the anthropological discipline.

Submission Guidelines

We would like to invite all NYU undergraduates and recent graduates to submit their finest anthropologically related work to be considered for Antropologia’s first edition. Your work can be in the form of:

- Theoretical and/or empirically-based independent research projects
- Critical reviews of films/books/journal articles
- Academic papers written for an NYU course

Additionally, we are looking for hand and or computer-drawn illustration or original photography for the journal’s cover design.

Please fill out this online form http://goo.gl/forms/rk6OB8wEOs and send your manuscript/image to copyeditors.antropologianyu@gmail.com by Sunday, November 15, 2015.

Formatting Guidelines

1. Line Spacing: 1.5
2. Margins: 1”
3. Top Right Pagination (Last Name, Page Number)
4. Page Length: 5-12 pages (including tables, references, etc.). For longer work, such as senior thesis, you can select parts that you would like to be published.

Citation Guidelines

1. Tables, figures and maps must be cited in the text and inserted in the appropriate place, with the respective legends. All figures must be high enough in resolution, to allow for reproduction. All images copyright are the entire responsibility of the author (or authors).

2. In the text, references to the literature should be cited by author’s surname followed by the year of publication as follow: one author (Malinowski 1927), two authors (Bogin and Malina 2001) and for more than three authors (Smith et al. 2001)

3. A semicolon should be used to separate two or more references (Waldrón 1994; Cockburn 2000) or works from the same author but with different dates
(Dias 1998; 1999)

4. References will be arranged alphabetically, not chronologically, by author’s or authors’ surname in the following style: Author’s name (or names), year of publication, complete title, volume, and inclusive pages. Formatting of references should follow the Chicago Manual of Style.

Thank You!
